

T&LDS: Tube and lamp disposal system

An easy and low cost system to dispose of used fluorescent tubes and lamp bulbs whilst ensuring you comply with the law

Used fluorescent light tubes and sodium/mercury bulbs are hazardous waste. You must not dispose of them with general waste. If you do the Environment Agency can fine you an instant £300 or take action resulting in even bigger fines. To be legally compliant you must store them separately and dispose of them correctly.

From a starting cost of as little as £150, OSS will provide a special storage container and handle the collection and recycling of all your used tubes or bulbs. This is part of our unique HazTech hazardous waste collection and disposal service.

When the container is full you just call our service number. Within three days it will be collected then returned, empty and clean, within another three days.

It's as easy as that!

Cost for the initial delivery and container rental is from £150. (Depending on size and type) Cost for collection and disposal (including the consignment note fees payable to the Environment Agency) is from £85. Once the initial charge has been paid you will receive your empty container within seven days. When you want the container emptied, you request collection and pre-pay for this in the same manner.

Five types of containers are available. For fluorescent tubes, containers are supplied for 2 feet, 4 feet, 6 feet and 8 feet tubes. For sodium and other lamp bulbs the special container will take 32 spent bulbs.

As a producer of hazardous waste you must register your premises with the Environment Agency to enable waste to be collected from your premises. If you are not already registered our sales team can arrange this for you.

HazTech T&LDS is part of our complete hazardous waste collection service. If you have any other types of hazardous waste that need collecting such as oils, lead acid batteries, oil filters, paint tins or similar, or need advice on hazardous waste disposal, please call the OSS Sales Team.
